Scott Tilley seeking election as Area D Director

ROBERTS CREEK, BC — Scott Tilley is seeking election as Director for Roberts Creek, Area D, in the October 17 SCRD election.

Tilley lives and works in Roberts Creek, where he runs a local marine service business and also does scientific and technical work tracking satellites and studying radio signals from space for an international clientele. In 2018, working from his home station, he rediscovered NASA's long-lost IMAGE spacecraft.

"My goal is to strengthen the office of Area D Director and leave Roberts Creek better for having had the election."

Tilley's campaign is built around a deliberate, accountable approach to local government: listen, define the goal, make the plan, assign responsibility, execute, measure and finish.

The opposite is a reaction cycle: pressure builds, a response is made, decisions are only partly carried through, attention drifts, and the issue returns as the next crisis.

"The question is simple: are we reacting or governing? If we are reacting, break the cycle. If we are governing, stay the course toward the goal."

His priorities include protecting the Roberts Creek watershed and aquifer, renewing the Official Community Plan while preserving meaningful local involvement, delivering dependable water supply, long-term planning for fire protection and recreation, making development approvals predictable, supporting appropriate affordable housing and strengthening emergency resilience.

Tilley said his interest in local government has also been shaped by the experience of trying to understand how public institutions respond to residents.

"Sometimes the work of local government starts with a neighbour looking out the window and realizing something isn't right. I know what it feels like to ask questions and simply want to be heard. If there is something residents think I should understand, I want them to tell me."
