Scott Tilley's Statement Following the SCLC Labour Forum

Tonight I attended the Sunshine Coast Labour Council's All Candidates Labour Forum at Elphinstone Secondary. I appreciated the opportunity to hear from and speak directly with people from across the Sunshine Coast, not only Roberts Creek.

The regional meet-and-greet also gave me an opportunity to speak with the other Area D candidate and with candidates from Area B. Those conversations matter. The SCRD is a regional government, and many of the issues before it cross electoral boundaries. Building respectful working relationships is part of being able to govern effectively.

The SCLC asked every candidate the same question:

"What is one action you would take in this position to improve the lives of working people on the Sunshine Coast?"

My 75-second response:

One action I would take is to change how the SCRD approaches housing affordability.

My approach is pretty simple. Decide what we're trying to achieve, figure out what the SCRD can actually do, bring the right people to the table early, and see if it's working.

On housing, the goal is clear. Working people should have a better chance of finding a home they can actually afford and building a life here.

Instead of just reacting to one application after another, I want the SCRD to figure out what's making housing harder and more expensive to deliver, whether that's planning, servicing, infrastructure or process, and then use the tools it has to help good projects move forward and encourage new ones.

That means working earlier with non-profits, builders, communities and senior governments. That's how we do better: plan ahead, remove practical barriers, and make it easier for working people to afford to live here.

Thank you to the SCLC for bringing candidates and the wider Sunshine Coast community together for the evening.
