

YOU HAVE A CHOICE.

Scott Tilley's Statement to the RCOCPC

Thank you for making a few minutes for this introduction.

I have decided to stand for Area D Director because I want to strengthen the office and leave Roberts Creek better for having had the election.

Many of you first became aware of me through a neighbourhood land-use concern. That experience informed me, but it is not the reason I am standing. It showed me something larger: when a resident looks out their window and sees something that may not be right, they should not be left alone to wonder whether the system will hear them, understand them, or give them a fair answer.

I also want to thank this committee. When I brought that concern here, you listened, took it seriously, and brought it forward. That mattered to me, and I haven't forgotten it.

That experience helped shape how I think the job should be done.

I believe in Board accountability and responsible governance. A Director may have only one vote, but the responsibility is larger than the vote. The job is to listen, bring Roberts Creek's concerns into the full work of the Board, ask clear questions, define what we are trying to accomplish, and then follow decisions through to results. When government is working, stay the course. When it falls into a cycle of reacting to one crisis after another, break the cycle.

I have now put my priorities in writing at votetilley.ca. They cover water, environmental protection, development, housing, emergency resilience, recreation and other core services.

For this committee, though, I want to focus on the OCP.

I have spent time reviewing the work of the RCOCPC and participating in the community-engagement process this committee organized. That has led me to a clear position on the renewal and integration of our OCP with the rest of the SCRD Areas.

I support Renewal of the OCP Without Losing Roberts Creek. A more integrated regional OCP can improve planning, but the existing Roberts Creek OCP should remain the foundation for our part of that plan and evolve through meaningful participation by this community, including through this committee.

I also believe the role of the RCOCPC is more important than ever. This is a community-driven body focused on the long-term vision for Roberts Creek and on bringing that community perspective into the planning process. The Area D Director should nurture that role, respect the committee's independence, make sure its advice is heard early enough to matter, and support its good work.

I don't want to use the rest of this time giving you a speech.

I would rather hear from those of you who presently serve Roberts Creek.

I'm here to listen. That's the first step in governing.
